It can readily be seen that Ayer's Hair Vigor is one of the best preparations for the hair. When I began using Ayer's Hair Vigor, all the trouble of my head was cured. My hair is now growing again, and is as thick and healthy as when I was young. I tried several other dressings, but they all failed. It is the best. Mrs. J. C. FREEMAN, CONVERSE, TEXAS.

In one of the cars is the operator's living room. In the other is a turning array of bottles, jars, electric battery, cells, pipes and wires. The principle on which the work is done is that of sending electric gas through the pipes. These being lighter than air, and with great rapidity to an altitude of 4,500 to 6,000 feet where they are supposed to intercept a current of moisture moving from northeast to southwest and turning cold, and forcing a vacuum into which are drawn the moisture laden air currents.

About 4,500 cubic feet of gas is sent up per hour, and the records of the rainmakers show that, either through some influence or by good fortune, clouds have formed soon after the issuing of the gases at many stations—although in some instances they have been hindered. The heavens in vain for days. The operation is quite expensive, an alloy with muric acid, costing $15 a pound, being much used, and the cost of the gas is about $100 a day.

NAMED AFTER PRESIDENTS.
Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 24, 1904.
The twenty-three presidents of the United States John Adams has the largest number of namesakes, twenty-three in the Philadelphia directory. James Buchanan ranks next, twenty-one men of nearly as many vocations bearing the name of the only Pennsylvania president. There are fifteen Andrew Jacksons and fourteen Andrew Johnsons. The name of the father of his country is borne by eight day laborers, one caterer, two waiters, one janitor and one real estate dealer, or thirteen men in all.

The grandfathers of Benjamin Harrison has three namesakes, while one laborer and one upholsterer have the name of Tippecanoe's grandson. There are four James Monroes and the same number called John Quincy Adams. One Foster, one paddler and a weaver are known as James Madison, and a bartender, a clerk and a superintendent answer to the name of Zachary Taylor. There is but one Thomas Jefferson, whose occupation is not given, and the only John Tyler is a weaver. A brakeman and a minister of the gospel are Franklin Pierce, but there is nobody with the name of Presidents Van Buren, Polk, Fillmore, Lincoln, Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Arthur or Cleveland, except as a handle to the surname.

Born to Life.
"While I was in Brussels a few years ago," said Dr. T. L. Taylor of Boston, "I witnessed a restoration from apparent drowning in one of the hospitals that struck me as rather remarkable. A man had been upset in a rowboat, and was only recovered after a considerable time. An eminent physician in the city applied all the remedies he could think of, but no sign of life manifested itself. At a fortiori hour, or last resort, the doctor proceeded to apply plates of iron, heated to a white heat, to the upper parts of the body, near the more vital organs. After a short time, the other assistant of the assistants, faint signs of breathing were observed, and in course of half an hour the man came to life, and was finally fully recovered. The only inconvenience sustained being the result of the severe catarrhization which his skin necessarily underwent."

Trick of the Cigar Trade.
There is a little trick in the cigar business to which some dealers will confess good naturedly if you ask them about it. The dealers will display a card in a box announcing that the cigar is sold at twenty cents, $10.50 a hundred. The extremely innocent person would suppose that the dealer could not expect to sell many of these cigars at wholesale when a buyer of 100 would save only one-half a cent on each cigar. Well, the dealer doesn't expect to sell them by wholesale, and he doesn't sell them, but he knows that it just tickles a smoker to think that he is getting a single cigar for practically what it would cost him if he bought a ship load of them.

Bernhardt's Dressmaker.
There is a modiste in Paris who owes the fortune she is making to Mme. Bernhardt. Her name is on the billheads, tray-trunks and bandboxes, but she is known all over the professional and fashionable world as simply "Bernhardt's dressmaker." She picks her customers, gets her own prices, charges like a body of cavalry in combat and makes gowns, robes, wraps and other individualistic things collectively known as confections that are the envy or admiration of the gay world. She has a dozen American customers, a score or so of English patronesses and a hundred or more French women, for whom she designs.

What He Wanted.
One evening, at a symphony rehearsal of the Melinthe orchestra, Balow stopped the orchestra and exclaimed: "Kettle-drums fret!" The drummer, who thought he had done pretty well already, redoubled his efforts, but again Balow stopped and shouted: "Kettle-drums fret!" Once more the drummer put on extra steam, and when Balow stopped again, he exclaimed: "Kettle-drums fret!" ON AN IRONCLAD AT SEA.

Life on the Ocean Wave and Home in the Telling Deep.

Admiral von Werder, a high authority in naval matters in Germany, describes in a work recently published the behavior of iron-plated men-of-war in heavy seas. He says: "Even with a moderate gale and sea an iron-plated cruiser, if going against the wind, will find herself in conditions similar to those of a storm—at least the crew will have that impression. The movements of the stern of the ship are violent and exceedingly disagreeable. The waves coming by the advancing prow sweep continually over the ship from bow to stern. All windows and port holes must be closed and air reaches the lower decks, where the heat increases unbearably, only through the artificial ventilators. With the exception of the specially protected command bridge all the numerous port-holes, the ship is impassable, thus the whole of the crew must bear as well as they can the heat of the closed decks. On such a ship one can feel comfortable only when there is a storm in which a sailing ship would be completely at the mercy of the waves. In a heavy sea the iron-plated ship is a living hell. The long, narrow forecastle of the ship, which is not borne lightly by the water, and is rendered extremely heavy by the mangled and the mangled deck and the cannon and torpedoes, forces the ship to a high sea to pitching and rolling of such an extraordinary kind that they cannot be described. The crew of such a ship is not only exposed to mortal dangers, but the voyagers, they make realize their physical, extremely and dangerously nervous the mental impressions they receive wear them out and make the profession hateful."

THEY ARE WELL "FIXED."
What the Comte de Paris Family Have become Possessed of.

The comte de Paris was not stingy, but was fond of money. His view of his children was that without heaps of money, royal households or wigs their lot would be unbearable. Between the dowries he could give and the importance the courts of Europe attached to him as a "legitimate" pretender, his matrimonial prospects were brilliant. The marriage of Portugal was given $20,000 a year during her parents' lifetime. She will altogether have about $50,000 a year, so well each of her sisters.

The youngest son was left the reversion of Villa Manrique, which is now worth $10,000,000 francs. The comte de Paris must have been worth $25,000 a year, independently of what he has in the disposal of Galliera. He had a fourteenth part of the $25,000,000 francs of appanages, and of the "Orleans debt" of 16,000,000 francs, which the Versailles assembly allowed to Louis's children.

Of the uncle's and aunt's shares he and the due de Chartres had about $200,000 apiece, the arrears of their mother's dower income, which was secured on the Orleans appanages. The duchesse de Galliera gave about 1,500,000 francs a good deal of this was sunk in improvements of the En and Amboise chateaux and estates, and very little of it was spent on political organizations.

The fortune of the comtesse de Paris must be very great, but it has been kept "dark."

NAMED THE BABY'S CRY.
A Bachelor Brings His Knowledge of Human Nature into Play.

A bachelor is not usually accredited with much knowledge about the proper treatment of children, but sometimes they step in when asked to—that is, the mothers of the children—fail to treat. A well-known man about town, who is pretty well on in years, and not very fond of children, stopped in to see a married sister the other day and found her trying to amuse her little boy of about 15 years. Not long after he arrived she stepped out of the room to attend to some household matter or other, leaving him alone with the child. The latter eyed him dubiously for some minutes. He was a spoiled child if ever there was one, and he had no idea of making promiscuous acquaintances. The bachelor tried to make the little one laugh, but all he got for his antics was a sour look. Finally, without warning, the child burst out crying. Here was a quandary to be sure. He didn't dare pick the boy up and soothe him. His attempts at a variety line were dismal failures. What should he do? Finally a thought struck him. He looked at the crying youngster and the crying youngster looked at him through his tears. The impression he was making. "Cry louder," said he. The child obeyed. "Cry louder," urged the bachelor. A yell went up that would have done credit to an Indian. "Cry louder still," insisted the man, and the boy did his best to obey. "Cry louder," fairly howled the uncle. "I want to cry louder," said the boy, and he shut up his mouth with a click and was quiet for the rest of the day.

HE LIVED AS A GIRL.
Extraordinary Experience of a Youth in the Swiss Alps.

An extraordinary story of a young man passed on a girl all his life until a month or two ago is related from Treuchtal, in the Alpine district of Switzerland. He was known by the name of Laura Buevar, and came of a good family. Up his friends should have regarded the child as a female, and subsequently kept the deception is a matter of mystery. The young man is said to have found the companionship of the weaker sex very pleasant, and would probably have continued to frequent the society of young women as one of their number had not he fallen in love, but in order to win the lady of his choice he decided to change his name.

The earlier years of his life were spent in a convent school, on leaving which he studied a cure for stammering and subsequently founded a school for that purpose. This was so successful that in a few years he amassed 40,000 francs and then decided to study medicine. With this object he was entered as a student at Grenoble school of medicine as a woman, and to all outward appearances was one.

His features were distinctly feminine, and nothing in the shape of a mustache or whiskers were to be observed. In every way he conformed himself as a female and seemed quite at ease in the character he assumed. The only thing which might have betrayed him, perhaps, was a slight assumption of the male in his voice. This, however, was scarcely sufficient to attract special notice.

Painting Arctic Scenes.

Some of the difficulties of pursuing art under disadvantageous circumstances were explained recently by Frank W. Stoker, who undertook to make a thorough study of arctic effects in connection with the Peary expedition. One of his best pictures, he said, would be a moonlight scene on the coasting snows. To paint this he had to keep up a perpetual dance before his easel, making a few dashes with his brush and then shaking himself vigorously to save himself from freezing. He mentioned he had never seen, being so hoarse that he could not utter a word, his colors, even though they were on the conventional dark palette.

A Novel Mustard Pot.
A new kind of mustard pot has been made that insures always having fresh mustard. It is the size of an ordinary mustard pot, and consists of two parts. In the lower half of which is placed the dry mustard, while in the neck of the upper part is a small container for the water necessary for mixing, together with a little screw which, when turned by the consumer, allows the water to escape into the mustard below, the two being amalgamated by a turn or two of the screw. In this way a fresh supply of each meal can be obtained without waste or trouble, and as the pot can be taken in two in an instant, there is no difficulty about cleaning it.

Presented for High Treason.
At Tarnopol in Galicia a secret society was recently discovered, composed of some seventy high school boys of which the objects were the separation of Galicia from the Austrian empire and the establishment of an independent Polish kingdom. The boys met regularly an hour before school, to deliver speeches attacking the emperor and the pope. The government has actually prosecuted eighteen of them for high treason.
